Description

Malcolm Bricklin is an automotive tubthumper extraordinaire – he gets knocked down but he gets back up again. From the highs of being a hardware store millionaire by the age of 30 to the lows of being bankrupt five times, having launched both Subaru (successfully) and Yugo (disastrously) in the USA and becoming the inspiration for a famous episode of The Simpsons in which Homer creates his own car, his life in the car industry is one well-lived. Now in his 80s, he's still actively involved in automotive projects.

In among his amazing career was the SV-1 - Malcom Bricklin's dream. His very own car from his very own car company, which he launched at the age of just 29. Bricklin's 'SV-1' was a striking, wedge-shaped coupe that was aimed at the sports car market (especially the Corvette), but packed with safety innovations that were its USP (SV-1 stood for 'Safety Vehicle Number 1').
