The Ferrari Dino 246 GTS is a mid-engined sports car that was manufactured by the Italian automaker Ferrari from 1972 to 1974. It was designed as a successor to the Ferrari Dino 206 GT, which was a smaller and less powerful car.

The Dino 246 GTS was designed by the famous Italian car stylist Pininfarina and was powered by a 2.4-liter V6 engine that produced 195 horsepower. It had a five-speed manual transmission and was capable of reaching a top speed of around 148 mph.

The car's name "Dino" was in honour of Enzo Ferrari's son, Alfredo "Dino" Ferrari, who was instrumental in the development of Ferrari's racing cars in the 1950s and 60s. The car was also named after the Dino racing prototype which had been developed by Ferrari in the 1950s.

The Dino 246 GTS was produced in relatively small numbers, with only around 1,300 cars being built during its production run. Despite its relatively low production numbers, the car was a popular choice among car enthusiasts for its sleek design and impressive performance.

The car was also popular among celebrities, with several famous individuals such as James Coburn, Clint Eastwood and Jay Kay owning a Dino 246 GTS.

Today, the Ferrari Dino 246 GTS is considered a classic sports car and is highly sought after by car collectors around the world. Its timeless design and impressive handling continue to draw admiration from car enthusiasts, and the car's rarity and iconic status have made it a valuable addition to any serious car collection.
